To

CHARLES NEWTON LITTLE

in sincere appreciation of his devotion to the cause of Education, this book is respectfully dedicated
IT HAS been our desire to produce a year-book worthy of our Alma Mater, to bring to you a remembrance of your associations with her, her ideals, her traditions, and her achievements, along with the happy times spent under her guidance. If we have produced a volume that will help in a small way to keep alive in the hearts of every Idaho student a warm glow of affection for Alma Mater we will not feel that our effort has been in vain.

CAMPUS—WINTER SCENES
THE glamour of college life centers in traditions. It is the many happy memories of all the students of all the years that makes our Alma Mater so powerful in holding us long after we have gone from her doors. It is these same traditions that are the glowing, living spirit that is called the University. Whether that spirit is good or bad, whether that influence is for the building of better citizens and nobler ideals rests in the hands of those who attend and add to it their contributions—mental, moral and spiritual. Idaho alumni do not love their Alma Mater so much for what she has done for them as for what they have done for her. The richest of her gifts can be utilized only by those who contribute unstintingly.

One of the most firmly established of these traditions is the Bonfire and Pep Rally the night preceding the Pullman game. For two days the Frosh have the honor and privilege of collecting a great pile of rubbish to be burned as incense to the great god PIGSKIN. The same Frosh jealously guard the pile to prevent any Pullmanite with incendiary proclivities from igniting the pile too early and thus bringing down the wrath of PIGSKIN upon the Silver and Gold team next day. The bonfire is not the only event that takes place on the night before the big game. Any citizen of Moscow will tell you that the “Pep Rally” on that night is as wildly exciting as a three-day Fourth-of-July celebration and the battle of the Marne rolled into one. Late in the night the incense fire is lighted, the medicine men give speeches that would put fight into a wooden Indian and the pajama-clad snake-dancers do a barbaric ring-around-the-bonfire far into the wee-sma’ hours.
Harvard Contest

WHILE not thoroughly established as a tradition as yet the Harvard Contest may well be considered as such. In no other way is the true spirit of a school expressed so unmistakably as in its rooting at any athletic contest. Is the school behind the team? Are its members true sportsmen? Are they big enough to take defeat and smile? Can they win a victory without becoming arrogant? All those questions are answered by the way in which the rooters conduct themselves and are conducted by the yell-leader at a game. For any school to win a prize for its rooting is a compliment to its ideals.

On the afternoon of October 15, 1920, when Idaho and Washington State College lined up for the kick-off, no Idaho student present felt that Idaho would win, but they were there to put all the fight they could into the men who wore the gold jerseys and when the Cougars went home they felt they had tasted all the blood they wanted. The score was 7-14 in their favor, but Idaho won the Harvard contest by a wider margin than that and proved herself broad-minded enough to root for a victorious team’s players that were knocked out. The Pullman game is never a milk and water affair—it is a battle to the finish and brings out everything that a school stands for. When Idaho roots for a man she doesn’t do it merely because her yell leader asks her to, but because she admires fight even in a Pullmanite. The fair-minded, cheerful attitude, the loyal support of the team and the old “Idaho fight” won for us the Harvard contest in the fall of 1920.
The Wearin’ o’ the Green

To overcome all the ill-effects of scrapping and hazing between the Sophomores and Freshmen which held sway until the year of 1914 a series of athletic contests was adopted by the students and faculty by means of which the youngsters of the student body could learn to admire and love each other in the shortest possible time.

As soon as the classes are organized a day is set for the big contest and Frosh meets Soph in a manly struggle to decide which is worthy to lay down the law. They wrestle and race—pick-a-back—tug-o-war through a stream of water from a fire-hose and do the Hulme fight, originated by Dean E. M. Hulme. Then when it is all over they attend the “Bury the Hatchet” dance and amiably forget their differences in a general get-together in the gymnasium.

Of course it is now necessary for the Frosh men to wear green caps in order that the “uppers” can readily distinguish them from the Sophomores. This is accepted by them in all good spirit because they know it has been done by generations of Frosh before them and wear them with as much nonchalance as the Junior does his corduroys and the Senior carries his cane. Another object in the enforcement of green cap wearing is this—it is based upon the theory that if a man can bear humiliation without becoming naughty he can bear elevation without becoming haughty and thus a man is quickly catalogued as a good fellow or a “small-town sport” by the manner in which he reacts toward his little green cap.
Campus Day

The wearin' o' the green, instead of being an observance of the "Seventeenth of Ireland" alone, is continued throughout the year until Campus Day, when the Frosh is forever declared mature enough to doff his verdant emblem. It is on this day, in the early part of May, that every man on the campus turns out under the supervision of authorized leaders to clean up the campus, repair drives and side-walks, and put the tennis courts in proper shape. Right merrily do the "hard-workin'" college men wield picks and shovels and mix honest sweat with the rubbish they are loading onto the trucks and drays. All morning long they work—their courage bolstered up by the paddles of an enthusiastic vigilance committee and generous supplies of lemonade and sandwiches from the hands of the Campus Queens.

When noon arrives, as it does all too soon to allow for the thorough completion of all the work, everything is finished as well as it can be in the time; tools and drays are returned and the hungry mob retires to the various campus eating houses to restore its inward and outward self to more pleasant normality. Everyone must be attired as on an Easter Sunday morning, for now comes the coronation of the May Queen. She is elected a week ahead of time by popular vote. On this afternoon she marches down from the garden hill with her attendants and followers to her throne on the Senior seat under the maples. Here she holds her court. The May-pole is wound—the dancers do their utmost to please her gracious majesty and entertain... her guests, the townspeople and students. Thus the afternoon passes. As six o'clock approaches an outdoor dinner is served on the lawn and everyone eats until the last sign of anything edible has vanished. The festivities continue. Everyone must report at the gymnasium for the stimulating influence of a jazz orchestra, a well-waxed floor, and an armful of dancing partner. Even this must end and midnight sees the merry-makers home-ward-wending and another Campus Day passing into history.

The Ivy Planting

Each graduating class strives in some way to leave a monument not so much as a memorial to themselves, but as something to make the campus more beautiful, and every class since the early years of the University's career has planted trees and ivy—monuments that go on growing more beautiful and each year making Alma Mater more worthy of holding first place in the hearts of her children. Thus, as the college year draws to a close, another golden link is welded in the chain that binds us as a great family to our Alma Mater.
The Song and Stunt Fest

No COLLEGE year is complete without it—no college professor could know how he is known—no student could otherwise express his honest opinions of his instructors. It is first and last a screaming entertainment and always the pulse of a student’s feeling toward the men and women higher up. It was instituted in the spring of 1915, after Dr. M. A. Brannon took the chair as President of the University. It is the biggest vaudeville the fair city of Moscow has had the privilege of witnessing every year since. In the spring of 1918 it was decided to hold the Fest on the night of the State Interscholastic Track Meet and in this way give the High School track men of the state the opportunity of enjoying the University’s most hilarious event. It was on that memorable night that Slim Swansstrom starred in “Cleopatra” and made a thousand people laugh until they cried. That one event, however, was not the only artistic attainment made by the various stunt committees up through the years that the Fest has been held—they are many and varied and always there is keen rivalry between the classes for the prizes offered for the best songs and stunts. There is Grand Opera and slap-stick comedy, classic music and jazz, all of it original, and in some way bearing upon campus activities and particularly upon the faculty. Strange to say it brings the students and faculty nearer together.

The Song and Stunt Fest has called forth many of Idaho’s most beautiful songs and is a direct answer to the prayer so aptly worded by Bobby Burns:

"O, may some power the giftie gie us
To see oursel’es as others see us.”
The Senior Sneak

ONE bright spring morning the Seniors became very conspicuous by their absence. No one had had any warning as to their mysterious departure.

"They can't have graduated," said a Frosh, "because they haven't received their diplomas."

That was very true; they hadn't received their diplomas because they hadn't paid their class-bill. It was posted on the bulletin board and everyone knew it.

Those Seniors had sneaked.

Where, what time, and how, no one knew, but it must have been in the early morning watch, for not even the most nocturnally inclined Kappa Sig had any recollection of seeing the Seniors. Later developments proved, however, that a great train of eight-wheeled trucks left town between the fourteenth and fifteenth drink of moonshine, but they might have been headed for Paradise Creek or the front line trenches at Chateau Thierry for all that could be learned of "Which way?" So it was decided to leave the Seniors to sneak where they pleased and do nothing more to hinder them than pray for a heavy rain. It wasn't for anyone but the Seniors to know where they were sneaking any more than it was right for anyone but a Senior to sit on the Senior Bench. That a Junior, to say nothing of the Sophomores and Frosh, should have the impertinence to even think of looking for the picnickers was an unmentionable breach of tradition.

Traditions are hard things to break, as Napoleon was heard to remark as he footed it over the Alps.
UNIVERSITY
Hail and Farewell

At the request of the editor I pause to look back upon the past of the university, as far as I have known it, and to say to the students a word of farewell. It is but a little way to the birth of the institution, a matter of less than twenty-nine years; and of that time I have been here nineteen years. Yet the period, brief as it is, has been quick with incident and development. A period of beginnings in the life of a university is always fraught with importance, for in it the character of the institution is determined. Such years, therefore, must surely count double the slower years of maturity, as the spring counts double the mellow fruitage of the summer.

One of the most significant and encouraging statements that have been made by our new president is that he soon became aware of the fact that always there has been a little group of men here who have stood for sound scholarship. The statement is encouraging in a two-fold way. It reveals the fact that the respectable standard of scholarship we have maintained has molded the character of the institution, and made an impress upon the students, in a way that may not only be dimly appreciated but definitely recognized by any stranger who has eyes to see. And it makes known to us that in our new chief we have a man who is interested in scholarly standards.

Of all the achievements of our university, this stamp it has succeeded in placing upon its students is incomparably the greatest. And therefore the men who have done this work merit, in the fullest measure, your support. "I have come that you might have life", said the greatest of all teachers, "and might have it more abundantly". And the teachers we have here, who have sought to discipline you into enduring strength, who have striven to help you to feel the ample grandeur of the destinies with which you are charged, may they not also share in this proud claim? They have had no part in the contemporary tragedy of applying the quantitative rather than the qualitative test of excellence. It is you and they who constitute the university. Not in the buildings, not in brick and mortar, nor even in administrative officials who reside in places remote from the campus, shall you find your Alma Mater. She is to be found only in the warm hearts of your fellow-students and your teachers, in their intellectual and spiritual reciprocity. Those two things, the student and the teacher, are the only true and indispensable parts of a college. Everything else, however useful it may be, is merely ancillary. It is our teachers who from the first have made our university vital and have put it in the sure way to succeed. And if the teachers fail of support at the hands of the students, where else shall they find it? If the past supports the present, so the present must justify the past.

You are here to be made fit for the great work of this time of social readjustment by your Alma Mater. Seek not her fame in numbers only, nor be content with victories won on gridiron and track. Give to her, in addition, the name of a school of inspiration and duty. Let her children be known as men and women who perform well the homely and necessary tasks that make habitable the land, who carry successfully the honorable burdens of civic enterprise, who do their full share in making life happier and more worth while in our state. Let this be, while the years flower and fade, the crowning and perennial tradition of Idaho.

MILITARY
MILITARY training at the University is at the present time more efficient and better organized than ever before. General Chrisman, who took charge of the department in the fall of 1920, has remodeled it thoroughly.

The Cadet Battalion has been placed on a sound footing, with equipment and instructors for all phases of military work that are encountered by an Infantry unit. For instruction in these various lines, General Chrisman has brought together a corps of assistants capable of handling any contingency. Early last fall, Major Ralph Harrison, C. A., came to the department and gave them the benefit of his wide experience and knowledge of army problems as he met them here in the United States and overseas during the war. Major Harrison is at present away on leave, his place being capably filled by Major Frank Sloan.

In direct command of the Cadet Battalion is Major Homer Hudelson, a graduate of our University who saw active service as a Captain in the Infantry overseas. To his efforts is largely due its creditable showing. Assisting in the Military Department are Sgt. Eugene Naigele, in charge of office work, and Sgts. Lonie Woods and Anton Dahlen, in charge of all Government supplies and accompanying weapons. All of these men have had long Army experience in the work they are handling and found out an efficient corps.

This year the advanced course for Juniors and Seniors has become much more popular than ever before. More applications for this work have been received than could be accommodated. Last summer's training camp at Camp Kearny, Cal., which was commanded by General Chrisman, gave practical instruction in latest military methods to a number of Idaho Cadets. This class of instruction is now being given the entire Cadet Battalion, and with the training a still larger number will receive this summer at Camp Lewis, Wash., the work should continue even more efficiently than it now is.

The Military Department of the University is very fortunate in having as its head General Chrisman, who has given it the benefit both of his long experience and his up-to-date knowledge of tactics as they are practiced today.

ATHLETICS
THE ATHLETIC CALENDAR

The Department of Physical Education entered upon this year's program with the determination to stress two main factors in her departmental work: One to place the U. of I. athletics intercollegiately in the position that she belongs, and secondly to lay a great deal of stress upon intra-mural and inter-class competition. The department is also greatly concerned with the moral phase of athletics and gives it the necessary emphasis for the upbuilding of the gentleman athlete.

Our year, although one of ordinary success, spells much for the future of the University's Athletics and the reorganization of the University Alumni and their active interest in the University will be one of the chief factors in our future growth.

During the first half of the year Idaho broke even with W. S. C. on the diamond, while in the Northwest Conference Track Meet she finished a close third.

Our football season showed some improvement over previous seasons. Idaho won four games during the season and lost to W. S. C., 14-7, and Oregon, 13-7. During the season Idaho scored 75 points, while her opponents scored 48.

The basketball championship of the northwest was lost by one game. Oregon won the coveted honor with Idaho finishing second.

Aside from the major sports the wrestling team deserves honorable mention for its work during the past season. In time Idaho will be looked upon as a contender for high honors in this branch of sport.

Interest in tennis will probably be much greater this year than usual as we have scheduled matches with the University of California, W. S. C. and Whitman College. If the team makes a creditable showing in these matches there is a probability that they will represent the University at the Northwest Inter-collegiate Meet some time in May.

THE FOOTBALL SEASON

Football started out this year with a new lease on life under the able tutelage of Coach Kelley. Practice began with more than thirty men out in uniform, nine of whom were letter men.

W. S. C.—OCTOBER 15

Idaho began the season at the heavy end of the schedule when she met Washington State in what proved to be one of the hardest fought grid battles ever witnessed on McLean Field. After the first few minutes of play Breshears broke through the Farmer's line, blocking a pass and allowing Neal to pick it off and score for a touch-down after a sensational run of fifty yards. Irving kicked goal, leaving the score 7-0 at the close of the first half.

W. S. C. scored two touchdowns during the second half, kicking goal in each case. Idaho's stubborn resistance with W. S. C. right under the goal posts prevented further scoring.

Idaho played sensational ball throughout the game, with Irving and A. Breshears playing the leading roles.

OREGON—OCTOBER 23

The thirteenth annual grid contest with the University of Oregon was taken by the Web Footers with a score of 13-7.

The celebrated "jinx" showed up within the first six minutes of play when Brown of Oregon picked up a fumbled ball and ran forty yards for a touchdown.

In the second quarter Oregon scored her second touchdown, kicking goal.

After a series of shift plays and line plunges, in the fourth quarter "Beany" Breshears went thru the line for Idaho to a touchdown. Irving kicked goal.

The game was characterized by brilliant playing and was a scrap from beginning to end. Much spectacular playing was done by both teams.

MONTANA—NOVEMBER 20

In the best played game of the year Idaho walked thru Montana's line to a score of 20-7.

Idaho was prevented from putting the ball across the line for a touchdown during the first half. But Irving came to the rescue with two field goals kicked from placement at the forty yard line.

Montana came back showing fight the second half. In the third quarter Montana fumbled a punt which was recovered by Idaho. Irving made a long pass to Evans. "Beany" Breshears then put the ball over the line in short order. Irving kicked goal.

A few minutes later "Butch" Nagel recovered a blocked punt on Montana's 25 yard line. "Huck" Breshears and "Babe" Brown then tore the Montana line into shreds, Babe going over for a touchdown. Irving kicked goal.

Montana's speedy quarter got away and pushed the ball across for a touchdown. Montana kicked goal.
WHITMAN—OCTOBER 30

Out-classing their opponents at every turn of the game, Idaho's Grid Warriors trampled on Whitman to the effect of 21-7.

Captain Plastino intercepted the first pass tried by Whitman, and the Idaho Backs took the ball down the field on an uninterrupted march. A pass from Irving to "Beany" Breshears resulted in the first touchdown for Idaho. Irving kicked goal.

After receiving the kick-off from Idaho the Missionaries attempted a pass which was again intercepted by "Plastie". A pass from Irving to "Beany" netted the second touchdown for the Silver and Gold. Irving kicked goal.

At the opportune moment Grove Evans reached out and recovered a Whitman fumble, allowing "Beany" to crash thru the Whitman line for the third touchdown. Irving kicked goal.

Whitman's line touchdown came in the fourth quarter when a Whitman end secured the ball on a blocked punt and ran twenty yards for a touchdown. Whitman kicked goal.

UTAH—NOVEMBER 11

Before a crowd of over 7,000 fans Coach Kelley's warriors defeated the University of Utah Aggregation by a score of 10-0 in the annual inter-conference game on the Boise Fair grounds.

Neither team scored in the first half, tho the Idaho delayed buck took her within striking distance of Utah's goal several times.

After seven minutes of play in the third quarter Irving's toe booted the pigskin for a field goal from the twenty-eight yard line. In the last few minutes of the third quarter, with Irving and Whitcomb carrying the ball on split bucks, combined with several successful passes, Idaho marched down the field to Utah's ten yard line. With six yards to go on the fourth down, Irving dropped a short pass to "Huck" Breshears, who went across for a touchdown. Irving kicked goal, giving Idaho the long end of the 10 to 0 score.

The game proved to be a punting duel between "Gus" Irving of Idaho and "Spot" Ure of Utah, Irving coming out victorious. Individual honors of the game were divided among Irving and Whitcomb of the backfield on defensive and Captain Plastino, Neal and Pat Perrine for their defensive playing.

GONZAGA—NOVEMBER 27

In the final game of the season the Silver and Gold aggregation added another scalp to their belt by defeating the Irishmen 10-7 at Spokane. Gonzaga almost scored a touchdown before the Idaho warriors warmed up. But in the second half, with Irving, Whitcomb and the two Breshears under full steam the ball was carried down to Gonzaga's five-yard line. The sons of Erin annexed seven points in a touchdown and goal and Irving of Idaho retaliated with a field goal from the 35-yard line.

With "Grove" Evans as field general and "Tom" Kelley to teach them the game next year's eleven will be heard from. The Silver and Gold needs material. You men of Idaho—take advantage of this opportunity—come to Idaho—and play football.

Idaho, 10—Utah, 0.
CAPTAIN "SQUINTY" HUNTER

Guard

"Captained the 1917-18 and 1920-21 teams. Forward three years and guard this year. Made all-Northwest in both positions. Idaho is losing one of her greatest basketball generals. 'Squinty' scored the highest number of points for the Vandals."
"BULLET" FOX—GUARD
Captain-elect
"Bullet" got going with a zip this season and he looked so good they elected him Captain.

"BILL" CARDER—CENTER
Strong defensive player—was a "wiz" in breaking up plays. Shifted from guard to center and got the jump the biggest share of the time.

"LES" MOE—FORWARD

"AL" FOX—FORWARD
Captain of last year’s Frosh team. Won a place as forward with the Varsity. An able floor general—two years to go.

"PETE" WYMAN—FORWARD
Broke into the game in the middle of the season. Scrapped the ball all the time and is a good shot.
"GENE" HYDE—GUARD
Played guard on the 1917-18 championship team and came back this year to fight for Idaho.

"ADE" NELSON—FORWARD
Only played a few minutes of the season. An exceptional shot. Back next year and we expect him to win a regular berth.

"BILL" GARTIN—GUARD
A smashing guard—tall, rangy, and in the game all the time. Will be in line for a regular position next year.

"OZ" THOMPSON—CENTER
First year on the Varsity. Broke into the game in the middle of the season. Ideally built for center. Played a good game on the Coast trip. Much is expected of him next year.

"OSTY" OSTRANDER—FORWARD
A whirlwind whenever he got in the game. He'll make 'em step for a place next year.
THE BASKET BALL SEASON

OUT of twenty-three games played but four were lost—three of these by one tally. In scoring Idaho towered far above her rivals, making 625 points to her opponents' 419. Captain Hunter was high point man for the Vandal aggregation of hoopsters, making 211 points, and converting 89 out of 153 free throws. Moe was "runner-up" with 116 points and 23 safeties out of 30 tosses. Al Fox and "Wild Bill" Carder were next in line with 70 and 53 individual tallies respectively.

Two men, Al Fox and Wyman, made varsity letters for the first time in basketball. The team will be greatly weakened next year by the passing of the veterans "Les" Moe and "Squinty" Hunter and "Wild Bill" Carder.

Coach David McMillan had plenty of good material to choose from and Idaho was never in danger of being crippled through the loss of men. Hunter, Moe, "Al" and "Rich" Fox, Bill Carder, Wyman, Hyde, Thompson and Nelson were the men most used during the season.

Idaho opened the season about December 16 on the home floor of the Potlatch Athletic Club with a 39 to 7 victory. January third the Vandals walloped the S. A. A. C. in Sookane 39-7 and a week later put the skids under them for a 39-20 defeat.

January 13 was unlucky for Idaho. W. S. C. won—19-18, but the following night lost to the Vandals, 22-14. On the Whitman trip of January 27-8 the games both came Idaho's way and February 4 and 5 witnessed a bear-killing scene on Montana's floor. One week later the Vandals journeyed across the line for a third set-to with the Cougars, defeated them and repeated the performance the following night on the home floor. The Willamette game was close, fast, rough and won by the Vandals.

February 17 the Vandals left for the fateful coast trip. They divided honors with O. A. C. and lost to Oregon University and the hopes for the championship went glimmering. The Multnomah Club proved an easy victim to the Gem Staters.

After a week's rest the Vandals took two games from Whitman, March 3 and 4, and divided honors with the Bruins on the following two nights.

Oregon's Webfooters took the Conference championship and the Vandals came close second. The record of conference games is as follows:

“RAY” HARSCH
We’re glad “Ray” is with us as a “regular” this year. Did great stuff in the two-mile relay, Seattle.

“TURK” GERLOUGH
Idaho’s old warhorse. His last year, and he’ll be missed.
THE TRACK SEASON

WHILE not as successful as last year Idaho made a very enviable record in track last season. Three of her men, Irving, Perrine and McCallie, were sent to the Olympic tryouts. Perrine and Irving, picked by some as the best bets in America for the decathlon and pentathlon, struck hard luck in the form of a climatic change and were so out of condition that they could not come up to their usual performances. Perrine was the only one to reach Antwerp, but could not recover his condition completely enough to hit his old stride.

The Silver and Gold was carried by Van Hoesen, Harsch, McCallie, Hughes, Eaton and Gerlough at the Seattle Relay Carnival April 24. The Teams entered two events as follows: 2-mile, Hughes, Gerlough, Harsch and Van Hoesen; 1-mile, McCallie, Van Hoesen, Eaton, and Gerlough, finished second in the 2-mile and fourth in the 1-mile thus tying Oregon for fourth place in the meet.

The Cougar cinder kickers and field artists won the dual meet from Idaho by six points on McLean field May 8. The contest was characterized by slow running and good work in the weights. The climax of the contest was reached when Irving of Idaho heaved the shot 44 feet, breaking his own record by one foot three inches.

The meet with Montana, one week later, was called off on account of rain.

Irving heaved the weights for two firsts in the shot and javelin and Perrine rated second in both instances. Idaho obtained one more first when McCallie won the quarter. Jenne of W. S. C. set a new mark in the pole-vault for the Pacific Coast when he cleared the bar at 13 feet 1 inch.

BASEBALL SEASON

With a handicap of bad weather Idaho started the season with very little practice late in the spring of 1920 and divided honors with the Cougars in two games played April 23-24. On April 28-29 Oregon’s web-footed twirlers came into the home camp and grabbed two games. The journey to Whitman resulted in a win and a forfeiture. The Silver and Gold then journeyed to Montana and in a three-game classic annexed one.

Idaho played four games on the home field during the week ending May 22 and the score-book read: Idaho 8, Whitman 4; Idaho 3, Whitman 5; Idaho 7, Montana 10; Idaho 3, Montana 5.

In the final two-game classic of the season Idaho dropped the introductory game to the Cougars and annexed the second by a 4-1 score. Eddie Foran pitched some of the best ball seen in Moscow for five years.

This season’s material looks as if it could play real baseball and practice is progressing in spite of cold weather. Coach McMillan knows baseball and will turn out a Silver and Gold team that will bid strong for a leading place in the Conference.
FRESHMAN ATHLETICS

FRESHMAN ATHLETICS this year took on a more decided form than heretofore has been shown in the different sports. The opening season brought forth an increased amount of activity among the men for the positions on the "Frosh" football team. While the season was rather unsuccessful, due to the numerous injuries received by some of the best men, the team came off with an even break in its outside games, having won three and lost three.

Basketball material loomed big, and during the season seven games were played, of which four were won, and three lost only by narrow margins. The defeats were due more to a "jinx" which hovered over the "Idaho Kittens", and seemed only to appear in the last minutes of play, than to the superior playing of their opponents.

In the line of track and baseball little activity was shown this year. The only practice the baseball men received was skirmish with the Varsity players. No outside games were played and the baseball season ended shortly after it started. Track was also of short duration as no matches could be held for the "Frosh" contestants.

In the major sports of track and baseball the next year looms up as a promising star. Meets will be staged for the "Frosh" track team and games with outside schools will be on schedule for the embryo Varsity baseball aspirants.

Next year's Varsity football and basketball will be greatly aided by the men who have so successfully competed this year for "Frosh" honors. From the Freshmen class new material is looked for and if traditions hold true the old letter men will find competition high for their respective positions.
WRESTLING

This is the second year for wrestling at Idaho and although only two matches were held and one of them taken the sport has been thoroughly established.

Under the leadership of "Babe" Brown the Idaho team took the match with Washington State College 8-4 in the enemy's camp. Idaho won one event and two decisions and the forfeiture of the heavyweight bout.

The second event which was staged at Idaho was taken by W. S. C., 13-2

Tennis took a big step upward at Idaho last year. The courts were improved, giving a great deal more playing space. This encouraged more to go in for the game. From those who turned out an elimination tournament picked the three who were to represent Idaho in the Conference Tournament which was held here.

Idaho was handicapped first by the lack of tennis courts, and second by the weather, which permitted but a few weeks of playing weather before the tournament.

W. S. C. and Whitman were the only conference teams to appear at the meet. In the drawing for opponents Idaho drew W. S. C. in the singles and Whitman for first match in doubles, W. S. C. drawing bye. In the singles E. Hunter of Idaho was defeated, 6-4, 6-2, and Wyman of Idaho was defeated, 4-6, 6-4, 6-2, while K. Hunter of Idaho was defeated, 6-2, 7-5.

Whitman then played W. S. C. and won two out of three matches.

The next morning doubles were played off. Whitman drew Idaho. The winner of the match was to play W. S. C. for the championship. Garver and Webster of Whitman defeated Wyman and K. Hunter of Idaho in three hard-fought sets. 6-4, 4-6, 7-5. In the play-off W. S. C. defeated Whitman in five sets, thus winning the tournament.

WOMEN'S ATHLETICS

In basketball, baseball, hockey and tennis the women of Idaho have shown the greatest enthusiasm during the past season. A large per cent of the girls enrolled in the University answered the call issued to those interested in the various sports.

An inter-class basketball tournament was held in February, from which the Freshmen emerged victorious.

A tennis tournament will be an event of the late spring and the winners will represent Idaho in games with Whitman in Walla Walla in May. About fifty girls have voiced their intention to make every effort to play in this final tournament. The cold, damp weather of last spring proved discouraging to tennis enthusiasts, but the sunny March and April days of this year have already seen many in tennis togs and the material is very promising.

The girls of the University of Idaho aspire to do all in their power to boost, uphold and represent nobly their Alma Mater.
Interscholastic Basketball Tournament

The victorious teams of the eight inter-sectional tournaments battled for basketball supremacy March 17 and 18 in the University gymnasium.

Driggs came back this year and took the championship cup in a classical exhibition of team work and basket shooting ability from the Capital boys to the tune of 34-14. Elimination games were run off on the 17. Contrary to all dope Boise defeated Coeur d'Alene and Driggs made the south sure of the tournament by walking over Lewiston.

For high class basketball and dope-spilling the 1921 tournament far surpassed any that had gone before.

The fortunes of debate have fared less favorably at the University this year than formerly. The explanation for this is not to be found in a lack of ability on the part of the men who have represented Idaho. On the contrary, this year has brought out new material second to none. The "I" men, it is true, have disdained the field wherein their former laurels were won, and have thus thrust the fortunes of the University into untried hands. But considering the valor of the new recruits it is open to question whether any strength has been sacrificed by the absence of the seasoned veterans.

Our defeats have been due not to our weakness, but to the strength of the opposition. The competition has been keen, the kind that gives debating its value. The International Debate was particularly useful in exhibiting our weakness and whetting our desires for future victories.

The widespread interest in debate among the students, the practice which the debaters will get in the intramural impromptu contests to be inaugurated next year, and the additional weight which Mr. Collins brings to the Coaching Staff indicate that the history of debate next year will be written in a more triumphant strain.

MUSIC DEPARTMENT

Since its installation the Music Department of the University has played an increasingly important part in the affairs of the Student Body. It has grown in strength and popularity until it is now the interest of the largest part of the students. This year its faculty has been increased and its interests and activities have been greatly expanded.

The growth of the Department in the last three years has been greatly due to the leadership of Professor Edwin Orlo Bangs. We may safely say that by his efforts he has produced the best trained Men’s Glee Club which the University has ever had. Mr. Dickinson, the violinist, has not only been a remarkably good instructor but has played his way into the hearts of all who have heard him.

At the beginning of the year, the piano department was led by Miss Wegmann and Mrs. Sharp. At the close of the first semester we suffered the loss of Miss Wegmann, who was called home, but the vacancy has been well filled by Miss Clark of the Boston Conservatory of Music.
The Glee Club

The party of twenty-four that toured the state from February ninth to twenty-eighth made the greatest hit with its audiences that any Idaho Glee Club has yet been accorded. The club was warmly received at each of the fifteen Idaho cities in which it appeared. For the first time in the history of the club a visit was made to our neighbor state at its University in Missoula.

The financial success of the tour was remarkable. In spite of prevailing high prices and the large number in the party, the season is considered to have been a slight gain for the treasury.

The itinerary of the tour was: Coeur d'Alene, Kellogg, Wallace, Missoula, Montana; Idaho Falls, Blackfoot, Pocatello, Twin Falls, Burley, Rupert, Gooding, Boise, Nampa, Caldwell, Payette and Moscow.

"Clarence"

So far dramatic work has been done under the direction of the English Club, although some attempts have been made to organize a company of University Players as a separate and distinct group. Dramatic work not only develops the talent of the participant but brings some of the best modern drama to the students. In years past more work has been done in this line, but the quality has never been better. Booth Tarkington's famous play "Clarence" is the only one thus far presented this year. On March 30, the night of President Upham's Inauguration, this production was played to a "capacity house". The play was also taken to Lewiston, Coeur d'Alene and other northern towns.

The Hills at Lewiston

Once more I see these well-remembered hills.
To them the years have brought no trace of change.
They rise above the winding river's rills
And roll away in hazy range on range,
In shade and light and many blending hues,—
Now brown that fades to fawn, then fires to pink,
From pink to violet, lucid green and blues
That in the haze now swim, now melting sink.

Forget these hills?  From "Prospect Bluff" one day
I saw sunset: below me tinged with rose
The glowing river like a bright sash lay;
Distinct against the western sky arose
Dark bluffs made double in the river's breast;
And from the hills the swallows swiftly made
Their homeward way toward rugged "Swallows' Nest"
And sought with whir and whirl its sheltering shade.

Then all the hills were softly veiled in haze
Through which the opal lights of sunset played
Till faded from the sky the sun's last rays
And darkness gently crept o'er hill and glade.
I'll not forget the hills, for I have seen,
And in my heart have felt the witchery well;
The changing light, the soft enshrouding sheen
That lends to these rough hills mysterious spell.

Father Takes a New Partner

Something had happened to disturb the peaceful monotony of the Lewis' family life. It had happened since Zella had returned from college to endure the three summer months of vacation in Harlowton. Father felt less sure of himself, and mother, who always had prided herself on the generous slices of homemade bread and the large chunk of freshly churned butter on her table each meal, was beginning to wonder if the butter should be cut into tiny squares and the bread sliced into thin narrow pieces. For Zella had only been home a few hours when she had made this first correction, and had also suggested that Chuck, the ten-year-old brother, be compelled to wash his face not only around his mouth, but at least as far back as his ears.

But things began to look serious when Zella announced at the dinner table that she had an ambition. Mother said nothing, Father only grunted and went on eating, while Chuck eagerly asked if she had bought it at the auction held that afternoon in front of the post-office. Zella failed to hear her small brother's question, but continued to explain her plans to the family. An ambition is seldom anything to cause alarm in a well regulated household, unless it is unusual, but this was different. Zella explained that while in college she had been converted into a new belief, "New Thought", as it was called. As a result of her study on the subject, she believed that this was her second time on earth and in her previous life she had been an author of much skill and it was her duty to continue on her career. But Zella had been handicapped in this, her ré-birth, because she had been placed in the wrong environment. It was impossible for her to write, here, in her home, so she desired to rent a studio. Of course, she would run home now and then to see mother and replenish her refrigerator.

For a few minutes both parents were too surprised to answer. Father was the first to recover. There followed a very stormy scene, in which Mr. Lewis was the chief actor and Zella the chief martyr. After much had been said, Mr. Lewis gave final instructions to the effect that no money would be forthcoming for such nonsense. If she were a boy it would be bad enough, but for a girl to even plan on such a thing made it seem more ridiculous.

At this point, Zella came forward with her most convincing argument and the one in which she delighted most. Why was it wrong for her to live in a studio, if it was not wrong for a boy? Was she not of a new era where the standards were the same for men and women? Why was it wrong?

Mr. Lewis stopped, not only because his knowledge of this new era was limited, but because he knew that it was wrong but he could not explain why he felt so. His strongest argument seemed to be in regard to the money part, and this he repeated most emphatically, then left before there was chance for further argument.

Zelia knew she could neither rent a studio or live in one without money. If her father would not give it to her she would have to work and that would interfere with her new religion. So she spent the next few days in a distracted and tolerant manner toward her mother and a sort of mental aloofness toward her father and small brother. The one thing that was sure to bring her mind back to the family group was Chuck's use of the English language. He had not, as yet, learned whether "These things is" or "These things are", and if given a choice he would be sure to say "I seen", only to be immediately corrected by his sister. It never seemed to make any difference where Chuck was or how often he said it, Zelia was sure to hear and just as sure to correct him. Then as Chuck found it wiser to lean~ the house than to stay and argue, he would emit a disgusted "Oh Gee" and dash out to entertain his playmates with a circus performance in which he played the part of "Hattie the Haughty".

Mrs. Lewis was silent about her daughter's "New Thought" religion and her efforts to improve Chuck's grammar. There was something that to Zella's mother seemed far more serious and required more immediate action. For Mrs. Lewis still remembered the stormy scenes she had had with her thirteen-year-old daughter about the length of her skirts. Zella had stubbornly insisted that she was too large to wear short dresses, and now, at nineteen she was wearing her skirts where she should have worn them at thirteen. This was not all Zella had learned in regard to her dress, for each day Mrs. Lewis discovered some useless manner of wearing a useful article.

When it seemed that something must be done to restore the family peace something did happen, but how and by whose hand was a mystery as deep as that of the Ouija Board. It was the morning after the lawn party at Mrs. Graham's, where Harlowton's select young people had been invited to meet Harry Bennitt, a distant relative of the hostess. Zella had made an impression on the young guest, and as he was going to remain at the Graham home during the summer months she desired to make more of an impression. But the next morning she received the typewritten letter that caused her so much worry the weeks following. After she had read it she did an unusual thing, in handing it to her mother. By the expression in her daughter's eyes and the two bright spots on her cheeks, Mrs. Lewis knew that she must not take time to hunt her glasses, but immediately began to read:

"My dear Miss Lewis:

You could have looked so nice, at the party last night, if your dress had not been so very low in the neck and so extremely short. Why dress like a child when you no longer have the form of one? I assure you the effect leaves much to be desired.

"Sincerely,

"A Friend."

What Mrs. Lewis would have said if given a chance, is difficult to say, for she was not given an opportunity to even express surprise. Zelia hardly waited for her mother to finish reading the letter before she blazed forth with the assertion that it was only what one should expect from living in such a place, where your business was everybody's business.

"And," she added, as she left the room, "since father is so anxious to protect me from gossip, I will expect him to have this stopped at once."

Mr. Lewis became very angry that evening after he had read the letter, and vowed several different varieties of vengeance on the one responsible for this insult, not only to his daughter, but to the family. But, during the week, three other letters had been received, each more personal than the last, and Mr. Lewis had not so much as a clue. Zella was worried, as every one could see, and looked as if she cared very little whether she had been born once or twice.

Early Saturday morning Zella chance to be in the garden when she was surprised by a cheerful "Good Morning" from someone on the other side of the hedge. Looking up, she saw Harry Bennitt looking over the top of the hedge. Zella returned his greeting and then like all girls, modern or otherwise, began to apologize because she had on an apron and was not "dressed for callers".

"But I think you look very nice in your apron, and it would hardly be appropriate to wear anything else this early in the morning, would it?"

"Just like a man," thought Zella, "women must wear aprons in the morning, but it is not necessary that men always wear overalls in the mornings.” However, for some reason she did not express this thought out loud. They talked for a short while and as Mr. Bennitt left Zella invited him to dinner for the following day.

The following day was Sunday and with it came another letter. When it was delivered, Zella quickly separated it from the family mail and went to her room. She did not open it at once, but sat looking at it, trying to decide whether to destroy the letter without reading it, or read it and then destroy it. Curiosity conquered, however, and she read:

“My dear Miss Zella:

You looked very nice in your apron Saturday morning. It was a little longer than your dresses, and its simplicity made you look girlish. I believe that you are improving.

“A Friend.”

So the villain had been found. Who but Harry Bennitt had seen her in her apron? His impudence hurt her for a moment, but his interest also pleased her. Well, she would show him. She would be nice to him and then when he really liked her and was sorry, she would freeze him with a prepared lecture on “The New Woman” and her re-birth.

Zella said nothing to her parents about her last letter or her discovery. In the next few weeks she was with Harry Bennitt all of her evenings and nearly all of her afternoons. And Zella had changed. She said nothing about “New Thought” and had even overlooked several of Chuck’s errors. When the time was ready for her revenge on Harry, Zella did not care to do it, and after postponing it several times she at last told him the story. It did not take Harry long to convince her he was not the unknown friend, because, as Zella later said, “she had never really thought he was”.

One afternoon, not long afterwards, Chuck managed to find enough courage to go to his father’s office, on business. The particular business on hand was to convince his father that his bicycle needed two new tires. After listening to his son’s request Mr. Lewis dismissed him with the unsatisfactory answer of, “We will see about it, later.” Chuck was disappointed. How was he going to explain that he must have those tires right away. While trying to think of some other way of presenting his case, Chuck stopped at the typewriter desk, and began to turn the pile of loose papers. Suddenly, he chanced to read the heading of an unfinished letter, still in the typewriter. “My dear Miss Lewis,” it began, “you looked——.” On the desk were two more, similar to the one in the typewriter.

“Gee, Dad! I found something.”

Mr. Lewis turned to where his son was standing, with one of the unfinished letters in his hand.

“Dad, these letters is——” began Chuck.

“These letters are, my son,” sharply corrected Mr. Lewis. “Chuck, you may see about your tires immediately, and—remember that business partners never reveal secrets. Are we going to be partners?”

Chuck looked at his father, solemnly for a few seconds—then he grinned, “Gee, yes.”

Jerry

"Mule nature and human nature's just about the same," remarked Arthur Ainsworthy one stormy April afternoon, as he came out of a brown study.

"How, Art?" asked "Pop" Henderson. The men were lounging in the bunk-house because of the weather.

"Which of us are mules, Art?" jibed young Haywood.

"Well," began Ainsworthy, "you fellows know how mules act. There are a very few mules that are good all the time; most mules are fairly good most of the time; then there's a bunch that's never good. You can divide men the same way; saints, the average man, and jail birds.

"Now, I've got a jailbird of a mule, only he roams the grassy meadows, for he is too mean to work. I used to think I'd sell him, but I didn't like to sting somebody else. Then an incident happened which made me want to keep him, although I haven't worked him for almost a year. He is hard to catch and harder to work. Whenever I wanted to "catch up" the beast I'd have to make a half holiday for the boys. Generally one of us on a pony would run Jerry into the barn. Jerry is the mule in question. He is that pretty Maltese-colored mule. Generally a barricade was built across the part of the barn where Jerry and the pony were. Next, we on the ground got out of the way so if Mr. Mule ripped things up we would still be whole. One day the fellow riding the horse got his leg broke by Jerry kicking him. After that the man on the horse kept the leg toward Jerry thrown across the pommel of the saddle."

"Why didn't ya rope him?" queried Haywood.

"We'll let you hang on to the rope the next time we rope him."

"No, thanks," came the reply.

Arthur paused a moment and then began again. "The summer I had my deep well dug there was a high school lad working for me. He boasted so about his driving that I gave him my outlaw to work. A week later I discovered the boy going into Jerry's stall through the hay mow. I can't say I blamed him much.

"That evening I asked him how he liked to work Jerry. He didn't like to talk about it, but said that Jerry was all right if the team wasn't going up hill. This was news to me, but the lad's statement was proved true during the following harvest.

"I hadn't intended to work my hard-boiled property, but I needed some extra stock, so I stuck him in on the combine. The next afternoon we came to that steep pitch at the head of the big draw in the big wheat field. You know my land corners there with part of the draw head off my property. It's a bad turn for a machine and once you start you don't dare stop."

Again Ainsworthy paused and gazed around the group on the bunks. The bunk-house was better than most. It had enough windows to insure good ventilation; it was neatly white-washed inside and out; there were three sets of double-decked bunks with plenty of room between for clothes room. Several comfortable chairs stood around, but none were occupied, for the men lay on their bunks listening to the rancher's story.

"The incident which made me decide to keep my jailbird happened that same summer I dug the deep well. Up to that time I bought my water from Sullivan the same as the rest of the farmers around here."

"Who is Sullivan?" inquired the Professor.

"He's the man who owns the warehouse, the store, the only home and the water supply at Fairlands," volunteered young Henderson. "You see," he went on, "it costs too much to dig a well in this neck of the timberless woods so the water is shipped in from down near Wallula. The water train comes up twice a week with the stuff they—I mean Sullivan—sells for two dollars a thousand gallons. Art's well, here, cost about ten thousand dollars, for we are forty-five miles from Walla Walla and the well had to be bored through rock. Most men can't stand the ten thousand dollars. I didn't mean to interrupt your story, Art."

"As I said," went on the Boss, "I got my water from Sullivan and thereon hangs my story. However, I'm getting ahead of myself, so I'll back step to where I learned that Jerry wouldn't pull up hill.

"This particular day Jerry seemed inclined to balk. The combine driver rigged a chain around his neck and fastened it to the hitch of the team in front of him. With the chain on him he would either have to go or get choked. The scheme worked all right until the machine came to the head of the draw I mentioned. Here was the bad corner I told you about. Jerry wouldn't pull and was literally dragged up hill for a hundred yards. The driver didn't dare stop till the machine was around the corner and up the hill. The mule was not only nearly choked to death, but the hide was ripped all the way around his neck."
by the chain. Of course, we had to take him out and dope his cuts. For a whole week Jerry was as gentle as a pussy. I turned him out in the pasture at the end of a week, for I didn't want to be bothered with him at the stable.

"The day after I turned him loose I moved the outfit to the upper place and left my wife and twelve-year-old Jean here. Well, for some reason Jerry didn't come down to water for almost two days. When he finally did come there was no one to open the gate for him. He must have been pretty stiff yet or he would have broken down the fence. Jean saw him waiting by the gate and, girl-fashion, felt sorry for him. Ordinarily she wouldn't have gone near the mule, for I had thrown a pretty heavy scare into her, but her pity got the best of her fear. She let him in and he seemed to appreciate it. I looked at her for a while, then took a big drink, rolled, drank again, and trotted off through the gate.

"The next week was the hottest I've ever seen it and to cap it the Sunday water train struck a cow and dumped our water off the track. We didn't get water for four days because of that cow. The cistern at the station ran dry Monday. We had to stop working, of course, and to save feed I turned the stock, about forty-five head, into the pasture.

"Thursday morning the water came in but the stock didn't come down to the barns till the middle of the afternoon. No one happened to be near the barns, as the day was so hot. Heat waves danced from everything. The waves distorted things so that it made the buildings look like they were trying to 'shimmy'. The flies were black on every living object and bit worse than mosquitoes. Any movement along the road stirred up a cloud of stifling alkali dust which added nothing to the comfort of the day. These conditions made the men irritable and cross, so that they thought of nothing but personal comfort. When the stock came down the men just didn't pay any attention to them. Jean, however, tried to let the mules in, but something was out of kilter with the gate. Seeing some one at the gate made the animals over-anxious and impatient. After working some time, Jean was startled to hear a chang! and see a mule go through the fence. Others followed, causing a stampede. She cowered back in the corner near the trough. The animals became frantic in their efforts to get to the water. In their struggles they knocked over the trough. Then they began to fight. As the fence which enclosed the corral was hog-tight and high, Jean had to stay where she was. The fight became a battle. Jean fell. It looked like she would be trampled under the hoofs of the struggling animals. I started for the scene as soon as I could, but what was I to do? Just as it seemed worst for the little girl a new note was sounded. I saw Jerry fighting as if he had gone mad. He was standing between the fence and the herd fighting like a blue devil. My heart sank as I saw the fight so near that little girl of mine. But as I got nearer I saw that Jerry was fighting for her. Ears up, teeth gleaming, heels lashing, eyes flashing, screeching, squealing, and biting, he was slowly forcing that mob of mules away from Jean. Back the herd surged inch by inch toward what Jerry was fighting to save. He rallied and held for an instant within a few feet of Jean. In that instant I got Jean over the fence.

"Jerry, like most criminals, has his good spots."

If You and I

If you and I would smile a little more,
And I would kinder be;
If you would stop to think before
You speak of faults you see;
If I would show more patience, too,
With all with whom I’m hurled,
Then I would help—and so would you,
To make a better world.

But just as long as you keep still
And plod your selfish way;
And I rush on, and heedless kill
The kind words I could say—
While you and I refuse to smile
And keep our gay flags furled,
Someone will grumble all the while
That it’s a gloomy world.

The Late Guest

Everything was in readiness; there was to be no boisterous celebration, no stimulation other than the materialization of the plot. She had been thinking about it for several days and now her desires were to be fulfilled.

The rooms were hung with holiday decorations. In the dining room covers were laid for six, suggestive of a supper to usher in the new year.

The hostess surveyed the completion of her well-laid plans with a feeling of satisfaction. Once assembled, there would be no opportunity of escape. Bravely she fought down her emotions while awaiting the arrival of her guests.

A shadow flitted by the window and a light step was heard. From the rear of the house a faint echo of the doorbell announced that the late guest was waiting to be admitted. Excusing herself from the others, she led him toward the corner of the den and drew him down beside her on the davenport. Foolish man, not to notice the sprig of mistletoe hanging over him like a Damocles sword! He was dazed, overcome, as indistinctly he heard her murmur, “Faithless husband! have you forgotten the oysters for the cocktail?”
History '22

This world, Dean Hulme has told us,
Is very weird and strange—
Grotesque, bizarre, in fact, a world
Of multiplicity and change.

And different kinds of people here
Have different views on life—
To some a queer collection 'tis—
To some, a world of strife.

Classicists, Realists, Romanticists are they,
And Mystics (don't forget them) inward gazing, contemplative—
They say all sin is goodness—goodness only comparative.

They close their eyes
To shut the worldly mirage out
That is to pain and sorrow prone.
And after weary trial and disappointing doubt
They make the flight of the alone to the—Alone.

—Little Alone.

Night

Oh, blessed night that to our aching bodies brings repose,
And of each troubled fevered day denotes the close,
That to a wearied, strife-sick world gives peace and rest
And sends the winging birdling homeward to its nest;
Dark curtain drawn to let us see and live
But one day at a time,
And hide from us the joys and sorrows of our future climb;
Protector of shamed and misjudged humanity;
Hiding place of joys and sins and sorrows;
Keeper of countless ages of tomorrows;
Empurpled sea for stars and moon to play in;
Secret chamber given for heartsick, humble souls to pray in;
Balm sent to cool and soothe and hide an aching heart;
Oh night, protector and receiver that thou art!

GEM OF THE MOUNTAINS

The Gem of the Mountains has won its right to exist by having existed through eighteen years of stress and development, and is now regarded as a summary of the college year. Its purpose is to keep fresh the memory of student days and carry the University to those who are interested enough to read.

The staff is elected by the Junior Class, which is directly responsible for the financing, compilation and publication. Although a Junior book, it portrays the life of the entire University in a way best calculated to make it a keepsake for years to come.
THE UNIVERSITY ARGONAUT

The University Argonaut is the official publication of the student body, and is published each Tuesday at noon. The Editor and business manager are chosen from the student body and have full control of the policies of the paper.

This year the Argonaut is operating under the new constitutional amendment whereby the associate editor is elected instead of the editor, and after serving for one semester as associate editor, he automatically becomes the editor in chief. This system has done much for the continuity of the paper and assures an experienced editor at the helm.

The Argonaut is now a full-fledged member of the Western Inter-Collegiate Press Association, the editor and business manager attending the first convention of the association held at the University of Utah at Salt Lake City in February of this year. The Argonaut receives news dispatches from all the colleges and universities of the inter-mountain states each week. Press dispatches are also received from the Pacific News Service.

The policy of the Argonaut is to be truly expressive of student opinion, to carry all legitimate University news, and to work constantly for the upbuilding and betterment of Idaho. The Argonaut goes to practically all of the alumni and to all accredited high schools of the state.

History and Purpose

The “Ag Club” was organized December 10, 1907, for the purpose of promoting the social welfare of the students in Agriculture, to enrich their knowledge from outside sources, and to promote greater unity among the students regularly enrolled in the Agricultural College.

The main issues have been “Ag Day” or Agricultural Products Judging Day and the “Ag Bawl”, an informal dance for the “Farmers and Farmerettes”.

History and Purpose of Ag Day

Agricultural Products Judging Day was first authorized by the Faculty of the Agricultural College in the spring of 1914. The entire day has since been set aside for the judging of Agricultural Products, including fruits, grains, vegetables, poultry, dairy products, and livestock. Prominent Judges officiate at these contests and render a great service by their constructive criticism of the day's work. Exceptional interest is shown by the entire student body. The day is concluded by a banquet at which students, judges, and stockmen gather for a general discussion and good time.

School of Practical Agriculture

The School of Practical Agriculture is maintained for the purpose of training the young men of the state in practical agriculture. It is open to eighth grade graduates who do not desire or are unable to attend high school. It is also attended by boys who have had some high school work or have graduated from high school. The course is arranged for three years of five months each. High school graduates are able to finish the work in two years. The boys attending the school work on their farms at home during the summer and attend school during the winter months. The school term begins in the fall after the crops are harvested and ends in the spring about the time that spring work begins.

All of the College of Agriculture equipment is available for the use of the School of Practical Agriculture. The students get the same kind of work that the regular college students receive except that it is briefer and of a more practical nature. The greatest interest is in Animal Husbandry, Dairying, Agriculture Engineering, Farm Crops, and Horticulture.

Each fall a stock judging team of five is selected to go to the Livestock Show at Lewiston to compete with other short course teams. This team has been winning consistently each year. Last fall it took first over the U. of I. Vocational team and the Lewiston Normal School. The team consisted of Vernon Perry, Peter F. Kershisnik, Fred O. Horning, Glenn W. Davis and Hugh C. Sinclair.

On the Annual Agriculture Judging day the School of Practical Agriculture students are eligible to all of the contests. This year they made a clean sweep of the Dairy Cattle Judging Prizes and won a place in each of the other contests. In Dairy Cattle Judging the following men won prizes: Virgil Lickley, first; Fred O. Horning, second; Glenn W. Davis, third; Chauncey B. Mayes, fourth; Francis S. Coyle, fifth; Ralph Honess, sixth; Edward W. Lundy won second in Dairy Products; Fred Schuetz won fourth in Grain Judging; Peter F. Kershisnik won fifth in Fruit Judging. In the Animal Husbandry contest, Vernon Perry took third in Shorthorn Cattle. A special loving cup was given by Professor Dickinson, Principal of the School of Practical Agriculture, to the high man in either Animal Husbandry or Dairy Cattle. This cup was won by Virgil Lickley, he having won the Dairy Cattle Judging cup also.

Practically all of the students in the school come from farm homes and intend to make farming their business. Returning to their respective communities after one, two or three winters spent in study, they become the leaders in matters of scientific farming, cooperative movements and right living.

The S. P. A. Literary Society is one of the oldest organizations in the school. Since the beginning it has served as a means of carrying on the "extra activities" connected with the business of securing an education.

As each student enters the school he automatically becomes a member of the society. He is eligible to vote, hold office and take part in all activities usually pertaining to membership. Meetings are held in a central location on every other Thursday evening.

Programs are given largely by the members. They are made up of musical selections, readings, debates, and discussions on timely topics. Business is transacted in approved parliamentary form, thus giving the students practice in the orderly conduct of formal meetings. The reading of the school paper, The Howl, is also a part of the program at each meeting. This paper makes available to all, the interesting news of school activities. A comic section adds humor to the occasion.

The primary object of the society is to give the S. P. A. students practice in public speaking. It has come to be realized that a man in order to succeed in life must be able to meet other men on an equal footing. It is necessary to be at ease when speaking, to speak in a convincing manner, and to be able to analyze the arguments of another. For these reasons, every Literary member is expected to take part in the programs. Whenever possible, instructors in the college or other specialists, are asked to talk on topics of interest to the society.

A second object of this organization is the promotion of good fellowship among its members. Occasionally parties and contests are promoted and thus each one becomes better acquainted with the other. A small membership fee is charged in order that fees may be provided at various times.

Interest in literary work is keen and many young men have finished the year with an ability to talk well and convincingly and at the same time with ease.

The Executive Board

The Executive Board of the University of Idaho is composed of the officers of the A. S. U. I., one representative from each of the various activities, and one faculty member. This board has charge of all disbursements of students' funds resulting from the A. S. U. I. fee paid by each student upon registration in the University, transacts all general student body business, and acts as a court of arbitration of disputes.

The A. S. U. I. is composed of all students enrolled in the University. A membership fee of eight dollars and fifty cents is collected each semester upon registration. The A. S. U. I. membership card received upon payment of fee admits the student to all activities financed by the A. S. U. I. It entitles him to a subscription to the "Argonaut", the University student publication, and allows him the privilege of voting in A. S. U. I. meetings and elections.

The general election of officers is held in May of each year. Any vacancies incurred during the year are filled by appointment of the Executive Board.

The Veterans' Vocational Club was organized in January, 1920, by a group of ex-service men who were in training under the supervision of the Federal Board of Vocational Education.

With the opening of college last fall, there appeared an increase of Vocational men on the campus. The old Elwetas House was secured for the new home of the Club. The membership was greatly increased and the organization took on a permanent character.

Professor C. W. Chenoweth was elected faculty advisor.

Chaplain J. Orrin Gould, Interchurch Students’ Pastor, employed by the Boards of Education of the Baptist, Methodist Episcopal and Presbyterian denominations, cooperating with the Y. M. C. A., began work for the students of the University of Idaho December 1, 1920.

As students’ pastor he cooperates in every way possible with the pastors of the churches in Moscow; encourages church attendance and affiliated and active membership; enrollment in Bible study in the churches; makes pastoral calls to promote spiritual growth; advises concerning personal problems; supervises the social activities at the “Y Hut”, and has an office open to all who desire friendship and counsel.

Mr. Gould organized a “Committee of Forty”, which is representative of every student organization connected with the University. This Committee endeavors to initiate and promote the social and religious life of the entire student body regardless of religious beliefs or denominational affiliations. Through this plan it is believed that the Christian forces of the University can present a more united and impressive front and greater emphasis be placed upon the primal purpose—the development of Christian faith and character.

The English Club

This year of 1921 is the fourteenth year that a group of students interested in literature and dramatics has been numbered among the organizations in the University of Idaho.

In 1913 a reorganization of the original informal group was effected under the encouragement of Dr. Moore, Miss Brashear and Mr. Lehman. The chief aim, however, continued to be "to stimulate interest in good drama, to create a theatre in which to present examples of the best English plays, and to uphold the high standards of this form of entertainment and instruction."

In 1917-1918, with the introduction of Mr. G. M. Miller as head of the Department of English, the purposes and membership of the club were greatly broadened. Under the new constitution all phases of student interest which might look to the department for encouragement were co-ordinated for mutual help. The membership is honorary, extended as a reward for special ability in English work, or for service compatible with its line of interest. Major students and instructors in the department, the debating teams, the editorial staff of the Argonaut and the "Gem of the Mountains", members of the casts, and the producing staffs are entitled to enjoy its privileges.

In its practical aspects the three standing committees typify the activities of the Club. The Dramatic Committee yearly selects and produces plays, drawing the personnel from the club and the student body.

The monthly meetings are in the hands of the program committee. It is their endeavor not to make the meeting "highbrow" or merely instructive. They try to add to the enjoyment of the members in various extra classroom phases of writing, of speaking, of dramatics and of literature.

The Original Composition Committee encourages the exercise of originality outside of the classroom in the direction of individual interest.

The success of the club in the winter of 1920-21 and the enthusiasm of its members promises for the club a permanent and enlarging place among the student activities of the University.
Associated Miners

(Affiliated Junior Society of the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers)

The "Muckers' Club" is one of the oldest and best known organizations on the Campus. It meets every other week for business, professional and social purposes. Papers are frequently presented by members of the Club, and engineers and other mining men come to Moscow to speak to the Club on various phases of the Mineral Industry.

The "Muckers" initiated the All-College Smoker on the Campus with the "First Annual Muckers' Smudge" last fall. It proved a success from every point of view.

The Associated Barbs, an organization of non-fraternity men on the campus, came into existence in the fall of 1916. The purpose of this organization is to promote a greater fellowship and solidarity among the men not belonging to other social groups, to act upon matters peculiarly concerning them and to assist in the unification of the student body of the University.

Meetings are held regularly and matters pertinent to University life are discussed. Social functions of the year include a dance, the first semester, and a picnic, the second semester.
Bench and Bar Association

The Bench and Bar Association was organized in 1912. Its membership includes all of the students regularly enrolled in the College of Law. The purpose of the association is to effect a unity of action among the students and faculty and to preserve and enrich the traditions of the law school. The association has established and maintained the "Honor System" in the law school for several years; is responsible for the "Lawyer's Court" and other things of benefit to those studying law. It is through the association that prominent lawyers, judges, and men of note in law are brought to the school to speak before its meetings and in this way the law school is kept in touch with new developments of the law in the courts of this state and of the neighboring states.

Women's Self-Governing Association

In accordance with the wish of Dean French the Self-Governing Association of the University of Idaho was organized in April, 1920. A Council was elected from the women student body to formulate a constitution. This was duly submitted and acted upon by the women, the Council thereupon being empowered to execute the laws.

Though the system is still in the formulating stage, in that it is comparatively new on our campus, the women and the Council, as the representative group of the association, are striving to perpetuate its purpose, "to regulate all matters pertaining to the student life of its members, which do not fall under the jurisdiction of the faculty; to effect a greater unity and a spirit of mutual helpfulness; and to promote and maintain the higher standards of university life."

A. E. F. Club

The A. E. F. Club, as the name indicates, is made up of the students of the University who saw service overseas during the Great War. The purpose of the Club is to foster the feeling of fellowship and camaraderie that grew out of serving together for the same cause and under the same conditions in a foreign land; to keep green the memory of those of our number who will never come back; and to occasionally get together for social purposes and to talk over incidents and experiences common to all.

Chief among the activities of the Club for the year were the Armistice Day ceremonies, consisting of a Flag raising ceremony on the Campus and a review of the Cadet Battalion by the A. E. F. men, and the A. E. F. All-College dance on March 18th.

The Club membership includes about one hundred undergraduates who served in France.

The Open Forum

President - - - - Lar Vern I. Borell
Vice-President - - - - William Briscoe
Secretary - - - - Marguerite Lowe
Treasurer - - - - Lloyd Burkey

The Open Forum is unique on the campus of the University of Idaho in being the only organization open to all students and in being the only organization affording to students and faculty opportunity to meet on terms of equality for the discussion of questions and problems of mutual interest.

Its active membership is limited to students, but all sessions are open to students, faculty, and any others who may care to attend.

The purpose of The Open Forum is twofold. First, it affords an opportunity for the discussion of any question of real importance and of interest to a reasonable number of people attending its meetings. Second, it is attempting to do real constructive work either through committees of its own membership or by actively aiding other committees or working in cooperation with other organizations.

Among the constructive activities that The Open Forum is backing through its own committees or in cooperation with other agencies may be included: A movement to establish a social center at the "Y" Hut; plans to bring the Phi Beta Kappa Fraternity to the University; plans to provide recreation for students not belonging to any social organizations or not interested in dancing.

The meetings of The Open Forum are held in the "Y" Hut every Thursday evening at seven o'clock.

Officers are elected at the first meeting of each semester. They consist of a President, Vice-President, Secretary and Treasurer.

The Etcheverry Club

This is a secret organization—so secret, in fact, that not even its members know anything about it. This profound silence can be explained in no other way—they don’t know. After the session is over the same secrecy prevails. No one knows what has taken place. When you ask an Etcheverry man what his club stands for and he says “I don’t know”, don’t accuse him of lying. He is telling you the sincerest truth. And therein lies the reason for the profound secrecy. The members are all “honey”, having been taken into the Club for the very sufficient reason that they were already there.

The yell is very simple; so simple in fact that it is almost idiotic. It consists only of the word “Etcheverry” yelled in unison three times, each time being louder than the last; thus: “etcheverry, etcheverry, ETCHEVERRY!” and then three times more in a diminuendo. Beautiful and effective in arousing Etcheverry himself into more furious attempts to show his superiority to the “honey” members by the use of such words as “recapitulate”, “diametrically opposite”, and such phrases as “the reverse is true”. Etcheverry himself, after which honorable gentleman (Heaven rest his soul) this organization has been named, has in turn been named for a widely known Irrigation Engineer, whom he admires most heartily. In fact, he has set him up as an ideal, and whenever called upon to answer a question, invariably says, “Well, you see, I don’t like to commit myself. I haven’t my Etcheverry with me”.

The favorite attitude of the Club members is an approximation of that of the Sleeping Beauty, until Etcheverry calls someone by name, and thus arouses him enough to listen to a question, say “I don’t know” and then resume the attitude. In my mind’s ear I can hear the unintimated say, “Why waste good time in such a Club? You don’t accomplish anything”. That is all very true, my dear misinformed advisors, but think what a beautiful chance for recuperation from the frenzied whirl of College Life. Oh, I would that I had the power to make you see how we look forward to the contented, soulful meetings of the Club, which are, by common consent, dedicated to Morpheus. The Motto,—the Yell,—and the Purpose,—are they not sufficient to call forth the unquestioned support of its members? Of course, they'll be loyal. There is no other way to be, until after examinations.

Wise and Otherwise

Few women are satisfied until they get a man, and fewer after they get one.

Puppy love is the beginning of a dog's life.

It took a thousand years to make a man out of a monkey, but it took only an hour for woman to make a monkey out of a man.—Sun Dodger.

The old-fashioned girl used to stay home when she had nothing to wear.—Virginia Reel.

Unless you happen to be opportunity, don't Knock.—Frivol.

If an education makes a person refined, why is a college course?—Jester.

Girls are bobbing their hair now—largely because there is nothing left to take off.—Punch Bowl.

The dynamite business is booming.
The ice business is still firm at the N. Pole.
But it takes guts to start a musical string factory.

Education—Brine, women and song.

The shortage of petroleum may be a burning question, but we still insist it is a light subject.—Punch Bowl.

Eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow we have hash.

Three things wait for no man—time, tide, and the janitor in the chem building.

If you can't change the world short change it. Let us prey.

Somehow we always need what we want worse than we want what we need.

There is no time like the present except the last thousand years—and perhaps the next ten.
AFTERWORD

Gentle reader, approach this section with kind feelings and without malice aforesight. If a joke is old, remember that age should be treated reverently; if it has one foot in the grave, feed it to the worms; if it is prehistoric, remember that history repeats itself; if a detective is needed to find the point, pass over it in silence. It was the intention of the editor to eliminate all of the jokes in these classes, but the staff insisted that certain jokes were now a part of Idaho traditions, to be handed down from one Gem to the next. So, let us follow in the footsteps of our illustrious predecessors.

And we might mention in passing that opinions differ on the subject of jokes. No engineer or pre-med will hesitate to admit that the lawyer is the biggest joke on the campus (they being envious of the latter's parking space—by the entrance to the library). Who would not laugh at the futile effort of a pre-med as he stumbles down a dark alley after cats? The engineers are a more subtle and scientific people. Louis Cady with the able assistance of John Gill recently opened up a new era in the realms of chemistry when they discovered that ice was soluble in H20, yielding, after complete solution, concentrated HOH. The electrical engineers are now perfecting an electric motor that runs without electricity (they have already been successful in producing one that will not run with electricity). The ag. bunch is very exclusive—society demands it (that is, society with the cows and pigs demand it). Between the hour of 12:40 and the Ad building, our Co-eds are the center of attraction, especially on windy days, that is, they seem to attract the wind.

However, we have been dwelling too much on the intellectual side of college life; it is an unwritten rule of Idaho's children that their college education come first and studies afterwards. The chief source of this college education is found in fraternal and sororal life. To give the frat men and women a better understanding of each other and themselves, we are submitting the following information:

PHI GAMMA DELTA

The biggest men in the University are Phi Gamma Deltas, for instance Bill Sutherland. They are called Fijis because, like the Fiji islanders, they are isolated from civilization, the campus. For that reason they should be good track men. It is said that Al and Rich get their wonderful speed in basketball by trying to get to an eight o'clock in three and thirteen-seventeenths minutes. They are broad-minded men, their views being very comprehensive, especially their views of the campus and of dates on Sixth street, which can be made more clear by a pair of glasses. Phi Gamma Deltas are firm believers in the survival of the fittest and George Morey Miller.
KAPPA SIGMA

Kappa Sigs, true to tradition, custom, and themselves are very epicurean in nature. They admit that they are of the aristocracy, nor do they hesitate to take their place in school activities and sorority houses. A synonym of Kappa Sigma is Jazz.

"Breathes there a man with soul so dead,
Who never to himself hath said,
As he lay sleepless in his bed—
'The Kappa Sigma band be d—d.'"

It is estimated that if the discords occurring in one week were all played at the same time, the vibrations would be disastrous enough to wreck the entire Swiss Navy. As far as expenses go, it is rumored that it would be cheaper to run a "home" of your own than to live at the Kappa Sigma house.

BETA THETA PI

As the Kappa Sigs are noted for their jazz, so the Betas have made a name for themselves as lovers of art, music, and the beautiful. In after years when we look back on our stay at the U. of I. we will think of the pleasant, balmy, spring evenings, just about twilight, when the silvery notes of a cornet duet were wafted by an evening breeze across the campus. Also famous singers and dancers are to be found here. The Betas are probably nearer to the original Greek culture than any other organization on the campus. When looking at Gus with his discus and javelin, or upon the graceful form and movements of "Josephine," we are reminded of Greek art in its true form. It is said that the Betas arc as philosophical and scientific and as accomplished in literature as the old Greek masters, but no one has been able to verify the statement.

SIGMA NU

Sigma Nu has had a hard winter—many casualties have been reported and many more anticipated. A visitor would have a hard time deciding what the Sigma Nu pin looks like, they are so easily confused with sorority pins, not in shape or design, but in number. The Kappa Sigs will have to hand it to them when it comes to results. It is noticed that a Sigma Nu is inclined to (be) Hastic. Heinz fifty-seven varieties have nothing on Sigma Nu jewelry.

PHI DELTA THETA

The most striking thing that ever happened to me was the response received from a fraternity when it was asked to do something. "Sure, we'll do it, what do you want us to do?" This willingness to do things puts the Phi Delts in a class by themselves. They not only do things but they do people as well, which accounts for so many lawyers in their midst. At present they are rather lost, but they will soon be next door to Delta Gamma again, it is hoped. They are firm believers in a liberal education, as exemplified by Ted Turner's poetry at yell rallies.
SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON

The S. A. E.'s are a multifarious aggregation. A poor upper-classman was bewailing the fact that the fraternity was being converted into a boarding house, but on the other hand—we see various youths enjoying harmless games of catch, and we hear melodious strains (almost to the breaking point) gushing from a well-intending piano in the front room. An S. A. E. frosh holds the record for accumulation of photographs (excluding clippings from picture play magazines, in which Lindley Hall excels). The last count was discontinued on account of lack of funds, but it is estimated to be between three and four hundred, not to mention the ones he carries in his watches, watch-charms, and bill-books. Profs are prone to make the sign "O" on their exam papers, meaning that as a hole they are just as happy as if they had good sense.

ELWETAS

For cases of mumps none excel them. They are also noted for other cases—the case containing the white owl, for example. They are more of a political organization than a social society. For keen business men, lawyers, newspaper men, and politicians they are in a class by themselves. Their name "Elweta" is one of the Greek letters that was borrowed by the Indians and never returned. Their eye for beauty is shown by the movie actresses on the walls and everything in general everywhere else.

KAPPA KAPPA GAMMA

When a fellow gets put into office or falls heir to a fortune or something, his first thought is "Can I swing a date with a Kappa?" A Kappa frosh is the height of any man's ambition, not to mention the upper classwomen. This accounts for the Phi Deltas building across the road from them—jealous of the Betas! Like the Betas, they are lovers of music, art, athletics. The star of the women's basketball league was a Kappa Frosh. They run the Thetas a close second when it comes to baseball and other outdoor sports. Their position in society may be compared to that of the Kappa Sigma, but no one knows just how. We might mention in passing that the Juniors' most popular co-ed is a Kappa.

DELTA GAMMA

The only reason why the most popular Junior girl was a Kappa was the fact that there were no D. G. Juniors to compete. You can always tell a D. G. by her smiling countenance and open face. They sing that Delta Gamma "takes the lead," and this has usually been found to be the case. D. G. toe dancers are unexcelled by any on the Campus. Delta Gamma used to lead the women's organizations in scholarship, but library dates proved detrimental to the studying of the newer sisters.
GAMMA PHI BETA

Gamma Phis are thought to be more quiet and sedate. They are adherents to literature, home economics and indoor sports. They don't seem to be as glad to meet you as a D. G., but you never can tell. Still waters run deep—too deep for most of us (exception Gus, “Eas,” and Doc). A Gamma Phi holds the intramural record for dancing in a small area. She danced a little over two feet in an entire evening. They are inclined to be sentimental as well as ornamental. A date with a Gamma Phi gives the “thrill without words.”

KAPPA ALPHA THETA

Thetas believe differently in regard to college education. They put studies first—as a result they are the proud possessors of Mrs. Lindley’s trophy cup. Inspired by S. A. E. athletes they may be seen on a balmy spring day gambling on the green, being engaged in a thrilling game of baseball. Another example of their activity is the large garden they keep up; also their house was placed a large distance from the street so that the sisters might get more exercise mowing and raking the lawn. If you want an educational strolling date call on the Theta house.

OMEGA PHI ALPHA

Omega Phi promises to make the others sit up and take notice. They are a jolly crew and a lively one. As yet they have been too busy getting started on their Grecian career to enter school politics and to join in the mad rush for dates. However, when the college men find the opportunities they have to offer—large front porch shaded by two huge fir trees, etc., there will be much rushing. Hashers better get in your applications early. Several fellows have already found that certain Omega Phis are much to be sought for.

ALPHA DELTA

Alpha Delta should not be confused with Phi Alpha Delta. The similarity exists in nomenclature only. It is rumored that Alpha Delta is going to form a Theological society. Their ambition at present is a home of their own (collectively speaking, of course). When successful in this, they are to reform the society activities of the campus, they being strong advocates of strolls along the N. P. railroad tracks and hikes to Moscow mountain.
BELLES

See the gay and laughing belles,
Ballroom belles.
What a world of merriment their winking eye foretells,
How they nestle, nestle, nestle,
When the dance is at its height,
While you valiantly wrestle
With the crowd on either side!
Keeping time, time, time,
With a madness half sublime,
To the rich intoxication that voluminously wells
From the belles, belles, belles,
From the swinging and the clinging of the belles.
See the coy and bashful belles,
Parlor belles.
What an evening of delight their little squeeze foretells,
How their eyes begin to glisten,
And they meekly sit and listen
To the tales of conquest won
(Mostly lies)
That you swear that you have done,
While you promise that they'll witness kingdoms won
Before their eyes.
Then a little hand it slides
Up your arm and then resides
On your shoulder—how it glides
Through the darkness and confides
Of the rapture that impels
To the huddling and the cuddling of the belles,
Of the belles, belles, belles,
Of the crooning and the spooning of the belles.

—Punch Bowl.

Final Battle of the Sopho-Freshman War

The shades of night were falling fast,
The rain came down like rain,
The soph'mores gather close—aghast—
The Frosh come on amain.

CANTO I
Freshmen to right of them,
Freshmen to left of them,
Freshmen in front of them
Ran up and hollered,
Boldly they cursed like h——,
Fought bravely, fierce, and well.
Many a hero fell,
Many were collared.

CANTO II
Right awful was the battle scene,
And many a back yard garden
Was stripped of every pea and bean,
All ruined and down-trodden.

CANTO III
Sophomores in front of them,
Sophs on both sides of them,
Freshmen behind them all
Running like thunder,
Sophs were gaining hope,
Thought they were safe, but nope
Right through the fence they broke,
Lord! what a blunder!

CANTO IV
The scene is changed to Fourth street,
The humbled Sophs are led
By strange uncouth, dishevelled men
With spirit far from dead.

Now the trough is filled with water,
Filled with cold and icy water,
Filled with wet and runny water,
Filled to welcome those brave warriors
Who had given up the battle,
Given up because they had to!
Now the Juniors and the Seniors
Gather round to see the splashing,
Splashing as the mighty oceans
Rocked and splashed by falling mountains.
Then with dripping countenances,
And with dampened clothes and spirit
Do these warriors hasten homeward.
While with shouts of fun and laughter
Do the upper classmen chide them.
“How are the mighty fallen.”

CANTO V
Thus endeth the tale of a winter night
When the wind and the rain beat hard,
And the Frosh and Sophomores had a fight
And many a face was marred.

The Chemist's Explanation
By the laws of mass action, the mixture brought on a violent reaction. The concentration of the Sophs on one side and the Frosh on the other was a constant source of agitation. Finally a struggle was precipitated with a large evolution of heat and gases. The reaction was somewhat reversible, going both ways with greatly speed according to the equation $\text{Sophs} = \text{Frosh}$. There being an excess of Frosh, the reaction was pushed to Fourth street and the Sophs were put into solution—being a saturated bunch not nearly as radical as before. The formosive Frosh were characterized by their co-efficient of rigidity and their cohesion, their motto being “For Gosh sake, hang together.” The reaction was accelerated by darkness and rain.

Playing the Game
He starts out with the usual scrimmage with the scrub. After he feels that he is sufficiently clean, he calls his Hike and is put on his way to her house. Now she must know her game. Her best play is her full-back, and putting on her new gown, she determines to give him the full benefit of it. As he advances up the field and his footsteps echo on the front porch, she awaits for the signal.

A faint tinkle of the bell is heard and she rushes downstairs and lets him in. He has an open field, but then so has she. Remembering what the coach, her fond mamma, who has played the game for herself told her, she draws him off-side. After a certain amount of preliminary play, he takes a line plunge, and it is some merry line that he can hand out. The game progresses. The lights go out, but this is one game that isn't called on account of darkness. He starts holding. She takes the tackle, but attempts a shift. Attempt unsuccess-ful, she jumbles with a forward pass, he passionately places his objective to its goal. He scores a touchdown that is long and lasting. The Belle is heard, “This is so sudden,” she gushes. “Again!” The Belle gets a ring. The game seems ended, but list. The Key turns in the lock and father enters. Our hero prepares for the kickoff, but here she pulls an intercepted play, so father shakes his hand and congratulates him on his success. Later she in turn is congratulated by the coach for her excellent playing. The score is 1 to 1. They both win.

Prof. Bangs

One day as Saint Peter was guarding the gate
That leads to the heavenly land,
Prof. Bangs, in hopes of avoiding his fate
Most humbly suggested a plan
That promised most surely to greatly inspire
The songs of the golden shore,
By forming on high an infinite choir
Of a few thousand voices or more.
Said he to Saint Peter, “My plan, sir, is this—"
And he smiled in his pleasant way,
“To have ten thousand altos and ten thousand bass,
Ten thousand sopranos, we'll say.”
But here of a sudden he halted in terror,
Saint Peter had said with a start,—
“In this wonderful choir, who on earth will sing tenor?”
Said Bangs, “I'll carry that part.”

The Glee Club were having their pictures taken at Sterner’s. After the first pose, Sterner said: “Do you want them taken all smiling?”
“No,” said Bangs, “We aren’t advertising tooth paste.”
“I can’t tell a lie,” said Sutherland, “I use Rexall.”
“I can’t tell a lie, either,” Kimmel spoke up. “I use Colgate’s.”
Knudson coughed—“I cannot tell a lie—I use my roommate’s!”

A Poem in Two Words
“Kissing Betty”—
But you have to know Betty to appreciate this kind of poetry!!

Mr. J. P.—My boy, what do you expect to be when you get out of college?
A. J. P.—An old man, father!

“Let’s kiss and make up.”
“If you are careful I won’t have to.”

That Solomon had a thousand wives
Nowadays is just plain knowledge.
But think of the number he might have had
If he had but gone through college.

The easily reached pull sockets for individual control of lights—easy to find in the dark.
The proper number of baseboard receptacles in every room in order that you may use the many inexpensive electrical conveniences that make entertaining easier and housekeeping a pleasure.

A kid got onto a weighing machine, From his eye gleamed a villainous ray;
He put a lead penny into the slot And silently stole a weigh.

"It's plane that I love you," he began.
"Is that on the level?" she asked.
"Haven't I always been on the square with you?"
"But you have many vices," she remonstrated.
"Not a bit of it," he replied.
"What made you brace up?"
"The fact that I saw you," he answered.
"I ought to hammer you for that," she said sanctly.
"Come and sit on the bench," he urged.
"Suppose the others should file in?"
"You shouldn't let your arms compass me——"
"I know a preacher who is a joiner," he suggested.

The Better Kind for Particular People

The Engravings in this Annual were made by us.

We also expect to handle the Engravings for the next Annual, for as a rule, our customers compliment us by placing their renewal orders in our hands.

And rode on "Ruthlessly".

Whatsoever a man sews always rips.

Shrontz—My great-grandfather carried a drum all through the Revolutionary War.

Gowen—And whenever he sighted the enemy he beat it, I suppose.

He who intends to get up with the sun shouldn't sit up late with the daughter.

The girl, the parlor lamp, and he.

“How can you tell the difference between light and heavy opera?”
“By the weight of the costumes.”
—Tiger.

Porter—Carry your bag, boss?
Never bus’ a bottle yet.—Gargoyle.

Ed—Why do they call Swanstrom “Si”.
Co-ed—Because of his size (Hmmm)!

She—Why don’t those tramps roll off the top of that freight car?
He—Why, because they are such rough characters, dear!

A little blunder now and then
Is relished by the wisest men.
