Habitat

Palominos live all throughout the United States. They prefer to live in grassy and sandy areas with a lot of water, where they enjoy eating grain and hay. They also enjoy living on farms!

Would this be a good place for a Palomino to live?

Personality & Recreation

Palominos are known for how versatile and agile they are. They are great for trail riding, showing, jumping, recreation riding, and make excellent ranch horses.

When treated well, Palominos love affection from the people they are around. They are very alert and curious and can easily be trained to do tricks.

This Palomino loves his home on the farm!

Fun Facts

- Palomino is actually the name of a color instead of a breed.
- The word Palomino is Spanish, meaning 'young pigeon.'
- Palominos with dark-skinned coats turn white in the winter, while light-skinned coats stay a golden color year round.
