Happy Holidays

Wow! What happened to the semester? Fall break is behind us and the end of the semester is looming. We are seeing a lot of fun projects in the MILL from water bottles to holiday cards. Expect to see new workshops next month and the return of a few popular ones, stay tuned!

Do you have a workshop you would like us to offer? Send us a your suggestion!

Introduction to Student Workers

Hello everyone! My name is Josi, and I am finishing up my final year as a Virtual Technology & Design major. I've been a student employee at this makerspace for the past few months and am loving it! My favorite creative activities are illustrating, cooking and baking, and working in the sewing studio. I am currently working on a food preparation app for my Senior Capstone. The app helps aspiring chefs improve their cooking skills, and their comfort levels in the kitchen, one recipe at a time. I am looking forward to working at more makerspaces in the future!

Biweekly Event: Holiday Cards

Everyone who put a custom holiday card together at the MILL has walked away with a unique and fun creation! Here are a few of the ones that have gone out our door. There is still time to make one! Come visit us before the end of the semester!

Make it @ the Mill: Origami

You know how addicting origami can be if you've ever folded a little animal from a humble sheet of paper - and we taught participants how to fold a fox, dinosaur, and a butterfly! Everyone was able to take an instructional packet home with them from the workshop so they're ready to create even more fun things.

Make it @ the Mill: Glass Etching

Our amazing student employee, Grace, taught our glass etching workshop. Making permanent etched designs on glassware is an amazing process and the possibilities are almost limitless!
